Aqualand Staff Celebrate Australia Day Pre-long weekend bash

Sydney (25 January 2018): The threat of uncharacteristic late-January rain didn't dampen Aqualand's Australia Day spirit with the 60-strong workforce transforming their Barangaroo office into an impromptu backyard.

Indoor cricket, a buffet of meat pies and sausage rolls, and local brews formed part of an early celebration for the nation's day, on Thursday 25 January.

Jin Lin, Aqualand Managing Director, commented, "We planned a beautiful picnic by the Harbour Bridge with lots of outdoor activities but the lack of blue skies and the heavy grey clouds with drizzle lead us to improvise. Thankfully, our sizeable kitchen could accommodate a bit of office cricket.

"I really believe it's important to recognise our nation's culture, values and identity both at home and at work."

Aqualand is a Sydney-based, Australian-owned residential development company. It established in 2014 and has since generated a portfolio of 18 sites with a collective gross development value of c.$5billion.

About Aqualand

Sydney-based Aqualand Australia established in 2014 and has since generated a portfolio of 18 sites with a collective gross development value of c.$5billion.

Aqualand distinguishes itself as a developer of both Prime Foreshore Residences, boasting views across the iconic Sydney Harbour, and a Strategic Urban Regenerator, in areas benefitting from close proximity to key transport nodes, retail hubs and education facilities.

It has a long-term aim of generating and fostering new communities, creating legacies for future generations. To this end, Aqualand consciously undertakes long-term projects, which range up to 10 years in development.

Aqualand is also a vested corporate citizen, sponsoring sporting and cultural initiatives such as The Australian Ballet, Sydney Film Festival, The Art Gallery of New South Wales, Sculptures by the Sea (Bondi), the West Sydney Wanderers and the Jane Flemming-backed Live Life Get Active programme.

Aqualand is a member of the Australian Property Council and Urban Development Institute of Australia.
